CLOSING DATE FOR SUBMISSIONS: 31st December 2021

Topic Areas: Ethics; Applied Ethics; Medical Ethics; Theological Ethics; Social and Political Philosophy.

The editors of De Ethica are pleased to announce a special issue in 2021 on Health care priority setting - lessons learned from covid-19. The ongoing pandemic situation put pressure on a number of issues discussed in the literature on priority setting. Covid-19 and its specific characteristics also raise a new set of questions. This special issue draws on ethicists' (broadly understood) experiences from working on ethical questions in relation to covid-19. Which are the lessons learned?

We invite submissions on all aspects of this topic. Questions and issues include but are not limited to:

- What conclusions can be drawn from working on ethical question in relation to covid-19?
- Are there relevant ethical questions that have been over-looked in the discussion about covid-19?
- What is the relevant competence that ethicists (broadly understood) have for contributing to questions about covid-19?
- In what sense is ethical theory relevant to guide decision-making in a pandemic situation?
- Are there specific methodological questions that relate to an extreme situation such as covid-19?
- Are principles used for priority setting under normal circumstances applicable in pandemic times?
- Which is the appropriate relation between ethics and legislation on the one hand, and between ethics and politics on the other, when societies are suffering from pandemic?

The deadline for the thematic issue is December 31, 2021. All submissions will be subjected to rigorous blind review. Submissions should be between 4,000 and 8,000 words in length.
